Wesley Smithart brings advocacy experience to her defense litigation work.

A determined litigator with a passion for advocacy, Wesley represents clients in disputes involving product liability, medical malpractice, white collar criminal enforcement and personal injury. Her clients include a Fortune100 technology company, a Fortune100 automotive manufacturer and several healthcare providers, as well as large national insurance, trucking and manufacturing companies.

Wesley forges strong relationships with her clients in order to understand their unique needs and circumstances. In addition to her defense litigation work, Wesley is part of the firm's hiring committee, and is the mentoring program vice chair for the Women in the Law Committee for the Alabama Defense Lawyers Association. She serves on the Alabama State Bar Young Lawyers Section executive committee and is the chair of its Law School Relations committee this year. Wesley regularly handles pro bono work, and has worked on several death penalty cases in Alabama.

After graduating from Huntingdon College, Wesley earned a Masters of Theological Studies with a concentration in human rights from Emory University in Atlanta. At Emory, Wesley honed her interest in the legal system by teaching a course on restorative justice in a women's prison and interning for a drug court program before attending law school at the University of Alabama.

Wesley grew up in Union Springs, Alabama, and now spends time exploring all that downtown Birmingham has to offer with her husband, who is also an attorney. She enjoys sunny days with her family on Lake Martin and cheering on the Crimson Tide.
