Tyler Yarbrough's devotion to client service shines through in her litigation practice.

Tyler earned her Juris Doctor from the Cumberland School of Law. Honored for her talents throughout law school, she received the recognition of Scholar of Merit as well as being named a Caruthers's Fellow, where she served as a writing mentor for her peers. Extremely devoted to her university and the legal community at large, Tyler served as the president of the Student Bar Association, as well as an admissions ambassador, where she interacted with prospective law students as the face of the university.

To further her legal writing abilities, Tyler served as the copy editor for the Cumberland Law Review. She also nurtured her love of oral advocacy while competing on the Cumberland National Trial Team and was part of a team named the National Trial Competition Regional Champion. Prior to her time at Cumberland, Tyler received a Bachelor of Arts in English from the University of Alabama.

Tyler grew up in Vance, Alabama, and spends her time outside of the office enjoying the city of Birmingham with friends and her trusty pet shih tzu, Auggie.
